Durban Container Terminal Update

A system failure at Durban's Container Terminal this morning has resulted in lengthy queues and long delays at the terminal gates once more.

Portnet has advised that the terminal will be staffed only by volunteers on Election Day (Wednesday 18th May) and that the NAVIS system will be taken out of service for maintenance on this day. As a result of this, it is expected that the current delays in landing and delivering cargo through Durban will persist for at least another week, or possibly longer.
